If not, then turn to your mest lesson in Pythanism; it will come stealing into your heart and mind your very soul as sweet and laxing as a mother's kiss, as soft and besuttful as the music of the growing blade of grass, as mild and gentle as the falling down upon the witherest flower.

The story of Damon and Pythins, revealing such remarkable fidelity, such unbounded faith and such imparableled triendship, will appear to you as a hearten tight remarking. Adjutant Fall called attention to the fact that the motion of Quartermaste. Schilling, adopted at the last meeting, providing for the notification of members of the camp to attend the Tuneral of dead comrade by messenger service was impractical and he suggested that it

Comrade Paschal thought the motion a good one. It does not contemplate that the entire membership be notified. The adjutant knew the active members and could simply notity them. Comrade Warner sald that this matter would adjust itself as it did in other organizations. On motion T. A. Fowler was released to active membership. Comrade Beavens moved that in case of death of members the adjutant either place a notice in the newspapers, or if too late to do that, get out funeral notices. Carried.

Comrade O. B. Kone suggested as a means of expediting the collection of dues that Comrade Beavens' store was centrally located, and it might be designated as a place where dues might be paid: Adjutant Fall said he was responsible for the collection of dues and he doll not care to share this responsibility with anyone, whereupon the suggestion was withdrawn.

Adjutant Fall suggested that one mem ber in each ward be appointed to look after sick comrades or those who might dic, and in the event of alchness notify the sick committee, and in the event of death notify the adjutant. Warner suggested that this should be the duty of each member
